Chef Tasos Alimantis Talks Authentic Mediterranean Seafood

Executive Chef Tasos Alimantis on his approach to luxury and redefining his Culinary Story in Mykonos

Cuisine and service are the centrepieces of the famous Myconian Imperial hospitality, so it is no surprise that Executive Chef Tasos Alimantis has funnelled his passion into Celeritas, a Mediterranean seafood restaurant.

It is one of Mykonos' top choices, well-known and loved for the tasty treasures of the Aegean it serves up. Celeritas' approach to luxury means paying attention to the finest detail and using only local fishermen's freshest catch.

Tasos cooks exclusively with locally grown, seasonal and organic ingredients. He's a fervent proponent of pure flavours which should not overwhelm but bring out the best in what the Mediterranean has to offer. Sea bass with black risotto, vegetables and lobster sauce is just one of the highlights in his repertoire. It goes without saying that there is much more to be discovered - not only Tasos' acclaimed seafood creations but also delicious meat and vegetable dishes that are not to be missed.

"The freshness and actual flavour of seafood should not be overwhelmed by displays of culinary virtuosity"

"This year, the Imperial's Celeritas restaurant has chosen to focus on treasures from the deep, with 90% of our dishes emphasizing sea food. Naturally, there are also delicious meat and vegetable dishes", explains Tasos Alimantis, who lends his "signature" to excellent dishes. He also recommends that customers try the Aegean lobsters caught by local fishermen between Mykonos and Tinos. He insists that the freshness and actual flavour of seafood should not be overwhelmed by displays of culinary virtuosity for their own sake.

Grabbing a front row seat to endless Aegean seascapes and browsing the menu of Celeritas seafood restaurant at the Myconian Imperial is the opening chapter to a gastronomic experience you'll savour and reminisce for months to come.
